THE RESSEGUIE FAMILY.

A Historical and Genealogical Record

OF

ALEXANDER RESSEGUIE,

OF NORWALK, CONN.,

AND FOUR GENERATIONS OF HIS DESCENDANTS.

COMPILED BY JOHN E. MORRIS.

HARTFORD, CONN.:
PRESS OF THE CASE, LOCKWOOD & BRAINARD COMPANY.
1888.

INTRODUCTION.

In view of the fact that the advent of the Resseguie family in America occurred nearly a century after the earliest settlements had been made, and at a period when the eastern coast had become comparatively well populated, and when town and church organizations had long been completed, it appears somewhat remarkable that no more of a historical nature can be learned concerning them than at present seems possible. The early family was composed of a sturdy, middle-class people, descendants of the Huguenots and Puritans, in whom, especially in the first two or three generations, the pioneer instinct seems to have been remarkably prominent. The manifest desire to make a way for themselves, a distaste for clannish village civilization, and a deep enjoyment of the life of nature to be met with in the forest clearing, urged them instinctively to push further and further into the wilderness, and left no time nor taste for a record of their lives and deeds; and this may, in a measure, account for the sparse and fragmentary evidence of their history, the loss of which we now so much regret. The full genealogy upon which the compiler has been more or less diligently engaged since 1883, and subscriptions for which have been repeatedly solicited, records over four thousand of the descendants of Alexander Resseguie, in eight generations, and would form a printed book of seven hundred pages. Its abandonment and the substitution of the present little work arise from the complete failure of the many efforts to obtain subscriptions at all approaching the cost of the former; while the latter is offered in order that the attainable facts of the early history may be preserved. The five generations noted herein, while containing but one-seventh of the descendants enumerated in the manuscript genealogy, carry the line of descent so near to the present day that searchers may readily connect themselves with their ancestry.

Appearances point chiefly to the province of Languedoc, in Southern France, as the ancient home of the Resseguie family; and to Toulouse, the capital of the department of Haute-Garonne, as their native city. In such research as the means at his command has permitted, the compiler has found the name in connection with no other locality (excepting the neighboring province of Guienne), and therefore considers the assumption reasonable that the American family, though not directly traceable to that section, is of the same nativity as those whose names and deeds have been considered worthy of public record, and are thus preserved to us. To the great regret of the compiler, he has been unable to connect the American family with its French progenitors; indeed, the early history of it prior to the settlement of its head in Norwalk, Connecticut, is unknown, but in the absence of evidence to the contrary, it is safe to consider Alexander Resseguie of Norwalk as the emigrant, and with him properly begins the family history.

It will be of interest, however, to note such facts concerning others of the name as have been found, although largely contemporary with the American family; and beginning in order of date, the first is

Dominique de Resseguier, who, in 1597, resigned his position as secular abbot* of the church of St. Afrodise-de-Beziers.†

*Hercule de Gailhac fut nommé par le Roi le 22 Octobre, 1597, à l’abbaye séculière de Saint Afrodise-de-Beziers sur la démission de Dominique Resseguier. — Hosiers, Armorial Général.

† Beziers is a town of Languedoc, in the department of Hérault, dating from 120 B. C.

Jean de Resseguier was born in Toulouse, July 22, 1683, of a family originally of Rouergue,* which for three centuries furnished eminent magistrates to the Parliament of Toulouse.

He, himself, was a member of that body, and president of its Chamber of Inquisition. He was elected judge in 1705, and the same year a member of the Jeux Floraux (a literary institute established in Toulouse in 1322 for the purpose of encouraging the art of poetry); later he became one of the founders of the Academy of Sciences of Toulouse. He died in that city, Sept. 25, 1753, leaving a number of unpublished works, among them a History of the Parliament of Toulouse, the manuscript of which is still preserved.

Clement Ignace de Resseguier (knight), son of Jean de Resseguier, was born in Toulouse, Nov. 23, 1724, and was intended from infancy as a member of the order of Malta (an order of chivalry, whose origin is traced to the Crusades); consequently, when young went to the island of Malta, where his vows were performed. After having won distinction in a number of expeditions against the infidels, he became general of the Galleys, amassed wealth, and had the advantage of a long residence in France. Chevalier de Resseguier, though gifted with wit, was naturally caustic, and imprudently directed a number of epigrams against people of influence, which resulted in his imprisonment in the Bastille. A keen satire upon Madame de Pompadour led to his detention in the Castle of If, from which he was released through the intercession of a friend.

The property which he possessed in France having been lost through the Revolution, he retired to Malta, where he was living when the place was surrendered to Bonaparte in 1798. He died the same year and was buried on the island. He was the author of quite a number of published works, both in poetry and prose.

Louis Elizabeth Emanuel de Resseguier, Marquis of Miremont, grandson of Jean, and nephew of Clement Ignace de Resseguier, was born in Toulouse, May 15, 1755, and married Angelique Louise de Chastenot de Puységur, grandniece of the Marshal de Puységur, and niece of the Count de Puységur, minister of war under Louis XVI. His merit and high reputation gained for him the position of advocate-general, at the age of 24.

* Rouergue was an ancient district of France, in the eastern part of the province of Guienne. It is now included in the department of Aveyron.

In 1788 he was called to Versailles to take part in the Second Assembly of the leading notables of the kingdom. The ease with which he dispatched his duties, and the wisdom and sagacity displayed by him, made him a noticeable figure in the Assembly.

Charged by his office of magistrate with the duty of suppressing the popular riots at Toulouse, he was one of the first exposed to the abuses of the Revolution.

At his demand the Parliament of Toulouse refused to transcribe the decrees of the National Assembly, relative to the suppression of the courts of justice throughout the kingdom and the organization of a new judicial order, and he entered before the King and the people a solemn protest against the injuries done to society by the revolutionary innovations. The answer of the National Assembly to this was a decree denouncing the action of the Toulouse Parliament, and stigmatizing the protest of its attorney as the tocsin of rebellion, and commanding that the members who had taken a part in it be immediately arrested and brought before a tribunal, to be tried for the crime of rebellion. Fifty-three members of this Parliament died upon the scaffold, but Resseguier was so fortunate as to escape to the Spanish frontier and thence to England.

Returning to France, he concealed himself for a number of years in Paris, until the re-establishment of peace restored him to liberty. He died of a sudden and violent illness, Aug. 28, 1801, as he was about starting to meet his family in Languedoc.

Bernard Marie Jules de Resseguier (Count), son of the preceding, was born in Toulouse, Jan. 28, 1738. His parents having fled from France, he passed several months with his grandmother (wife of the President de Resseguier) in prison, during the Terror, but upon the death of Robespierre regained his liberty. Later he was placed in the military school of Fontainebleau, and in 1806 had completed his studies and immediately entered into service as an officer of cavalry in the campaigns of Spain and Poland. His health having greatly suffered in consequence of the exposure and hardships of a military life, he left the army and returned to his native land, where, in 1811, he married Christine Pauline Charlotte de Mac-Mahon, and continued to reside in Languedoc, devoting himself to poetic composition. His first literary essays opened for him the doors of the Academy of the Jeux Floraux in 1818, and in 1822 he removed to Paris and easily found his place in the foremost ranks of literature. He founded, with others (among them Victor Hugo), in 1823, The French Muse, a periodical much in favor in its day, and which took a large share in the contest between the Classical and Romantic schools of literature. Jules de Resseguier inclined toward the Romantic, but without sharing its exaggerations. He was kept from that by two qualities, which he possessed in the highest degree: good taste and good sense. Although imagination was the leading quality of his mind, it had been cultivated in a more serious vein, and his tastes as much as his poetic opinions inclined him to lend his help to the government of the Restoration; he entered the State's Council and was nominated Chevalier of the Legion of Honor at the end of the year 1823, and in his work won high praise and esteem. The essential stimulant to high political career, ambition, was absolutely wanting in Jules de Resseguier, and without ceasing to be faithful to the work of the State's Council, he always kept his preference for a literary life. In 1827 he published a volume of selected pieces under the title of Poetic Pictures, and its success was sufficient to definitely mark his literary vocation.

The Revolution of 1830 separated him entirely from politics, and he refused without hesitation the oath of allegiance which the new power asked of him. His leisure was of profit to literature, and secured to the several papers which were founded at that time, a great number of poems and short works of prose fiction, in which the poetic inspiration appeared no less than in the former.

But in the brilliant life of Paris he never forgot his native province, and in 1840 he returned to Toulouse and "Sauveterre," the elegant home which he had built in view of the Pyrenees. The native soil and the domestic hearth became then his habitual themes. His writings, always harmonious and noble, became not more religious, for they had always been so, but more pious in all the sweet acceptations of that word, and also more touching.

His rare qualities were rewarded by a rare domestic happiness, and it was given him to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of his wedding. He reached the end of his career, strong of mind and of heart. A Christian eloquence which surprised even those who loved and admired him inspired his last days. He met death with serenity and found new accents of tenderness to bless his family gathered around him. He passed away on the 7th of September, 1862, in the 75th year of his age.

He belonged to a family where quickness of wit was hereditary; his sallies were always original and unexpected, but ever within the confines of good breeding.

Those whom he had once attracted never withdrew; as a friend he was always delightful and reliable, and his name will remain the accomplished type of the alliance of the best traditions of the old society with the most brilliant qualities of the new.

Albert de Resseguier (Count), son of the preceding, was born in Toulouse in April, 1816. He completed his studies at the German University, and was the author of a number of published works. He represented the Lower Pyrenees in the Legislative Assembly, and regularly voted with the monarchial and parliamentary majority. He proposed the reduction of the salaries of representatives; the modification of the forest laws; and moved the setting at liberty of Abd-el-Kader. He was a member of the permanent Algerian Commission, and caused to be adopted by the Assembly several propositions relative to this colony. He made a Report upon the regulation of the Laws of Petition, etc., etc.

On the 2d of December, 1851, he was a member of the reunion of the Governors of the Tenth District; signed the decree of the fall of the President of the Republic, and caused his imprisonment at Mont Valerien. He was a member of the municipal council of Pau, and of the general council of the Lower Pyrenees.

NOTE.—The above accounts were chiefly derived from the following works: Biographie Universelle, Michaud; Dictionnaire des Contemporains, G. Vapereau; Littérature Française Contemporaine; and Moniteur des Dates. Although search has been made through many encyclopedic volumes relating to various topics, and through a number of books of heraldry, nothing further concerning this name has been found.

THE RESSEGUIE FAMILY.

FIRST GENERATION.

A star (*) prefixed to a name signifies that the person's number and family occur in the succeeding generation, the number being in the center of the line directly over the family record.

I.

Alexander Resseguie was a settler in Norwalk, Conn., in 1709. Tradition has it that he was the younger son of one Alexandre Resseguie, a Huguenot refugee from France, who brought with him from the mother country a small hair-covered trunk, studded with iron nails, containing all of the family wealth he was able to secure, consisting largely of title deeds to property in France. Hoping to some day regain his abandoned possessions, he educated his eldest son to the profession of the law, intending when the time was ripe, he should return to France and establish a claim to the family estates. This hope was destined never to be realized, for the son died just previous to the time of his intended departure on this mission, and the father, disheartened, abandoned the undertaking; the trunk* and papers passed into the possession of the younger son, and at a subsequent period the latter were, the most of them, destroyed by fire.

Just how much of fact underlies this tradition we know not. It is the opinion of the compiler that the family fled to England, before coming to this country, and that one Alexandre de Ressiguiet, from Trescléoux, in Dauphiny, who was known as a silk manufacturer in London, in 1696, was the father of Alexander of Norwalk. It is probable that an earlier residence of the family in America would have been a matter of record, but no trace of the name of Resseguie (save one*) has been found prior to the appearance of Alexander in Norwalk, in 1709.

* This trunk is now in the possession of Col. George E. Gray of San Francisco. It is eleven and one-half inches long, seven inches wide, and four inches high; the top oval. The wood is worm-eaten; very little hair remains upon the leather, and the nails with which it is studded are of hammered iron. The papers contained in the trunk were nearly all destroyed by fire, by the wife of Timothy Resseguie (14), during a fit of temporary insanity.

Thus we are compelled to record him as the head of the family, and the ancestor of the American Resseguies. On the first day of April, 1709, he purchased a tract of land of Samuel St. John,† and from this time for many years, he was interested in

* "Sigourney and his associates were accompanied on their return to Oxford (in 1697) by a French minister, lately arrived from England. This was Jacques Laborie, a native of Cardaillac, in the province of Guyenne, who had been officiating for several years in certain of the French churches in London. Laborie had ingratiated himself with Lord Bellomont, the new governor, who procured for him a yearly stipend of thirty pounds out of the Corporation money, together with a commission to labor among the Indians near New Oxford. He brought with him his wife Jeanne de Resseguier, and his little daughter Susanne. . . . After ministering for some time to the French colony in New Oxford, Mass., and laboring as a missionary among the savages in the vicinity, he went to New York and took charge of the French church in that city, as Peiret's successor, for two years, Oct. 15, 1704, to Aug. 25, 1706. After this he engaged in the practice of medicine and surgery, and as early as the year 1716 settled in Fairfield County, Conn., as a physician, occasionally assisting the Church of England missionary." — The Huguenot Emigration to America, by C. W. Baird. It is possible that Jeanne de Resseguier was a relative of Alexander, perhaps a sister, and that her emigration to this country was the bond that drew him hither. The residence of both in Fairfield County, if not accountable for in this way, was a rather singular coincidence.

† Copy of deed. "To all people to whom these presents shall come, Greeting. Know ye that I, Samuel St. John of ye town of Norwalk in ye county of Fairfield, within his majesties Colony of Connecticut, in New England. For and in consideration of ye sum of six pounds current provision pay of said Colony to me in hand before the Ensealing hereof well and truly paid by Alexander Resseguie of ye aforesaid Town and County, the Receipt whereof I do hereby acknowledge and myself therewith fully satisfied and contented, Have given, granted, bargained, sold, and by these presents do trooly, fully and absolutely give, grant, bargain, sell, aliene, convey and confirm unto him ye said Alexander Resseguie, his heirs and assigns forever, a certain piece of Land lying within the Township of Norwalk aforesaid, near unto and bearing South West from ye Land called ye Heth. acquiring land, the records showing one hundred or more estates to which he held the titles, located in what is now comprised in the towns of Norwalk, Wilton, Ridgefield, New Canaan, Westport, and Weston. The ability to make these large acquisitions would seem to indicate the substantial character of the contents of the hair trunk.

On the 19th day of October, 1709, Alexander Resseguie married Sara Bontecou, daughter of Pierre* and Marguerite (Collinot) Bontecou of New York. She was born in France and reached New York with her parents in 1689. The summer preceding his marriage was probably spent in preparing a home, which, though its exact location cannot be pointed out, was undoubtedly in the extreme southern part of Ridgefield, a new town created from lands purchased of the Indians the year previous.† We have evidence that he soon began the career of a

* The compiler of this work is a descendant of Pierre Bontecou, through the line of his son Timothy. It was the original intention to publish a genealogical history of all his descendants, but so far as the Resseguie line is concerned this object has been defeated, as explained in the introduction.

† "In 1708, John Belden, Samuel Keeler, Matthew Seymour, Matthias St. John, and other inhabitants of Norwalk, to the number of twenty-five, pur-farmer, and had, in a short time, wrested part of his land from the grasp of the forest and reduced it to a condition of tillage, by the following extract from the Colonial Records:

"Newhaven, August 9th. 1711. The Colony of Connecticut is debtor to sundry persons in money, as followeth, that is to say . . . To Mr. Alexander Russigue of Norwalk, for 40 bushels wheat taken out of Mr. Jno Williams' sloop at New Haven, at 4s. 6z. per bushel. 9. o. o."

Until his death he evidently pursued the even tenor of his way as a private citizen and pioneer farmer, holding no office, and probably wanting none, and leaving but little trace of his life save the record of his possessions. He died in October, 1752. His wife survived him until May, 1757. The place of their sepulchre is unknown, but it was probably in the old cemetery in the southern part of Ridgefield, in which but two ancient stones remain to mark the spot where many lie interred. The following is the will of Alexander Resseguie:

"In the name of God, Amen. I, Alexander Resseguie, formerly of Ridgefield, now of Norwalk in ye County of Fairfield and Colony of Connecticut, being weak of body but of a disposing mind and memory, praised be God; calling to mind ye mortality of my body, and yt is appointed for all men once to die, do make and ordain this my last will and testament. That is to say principally and first of all I give and bequeath my soul to God who gave it; and my body I recommend to be decently buried at ye discretion of my execrs hereafter named, nothing doubting but at ye generall ressurection I shall receive ye same again by ye mighty power of God to bless me within this life. I give, demise and dispose of ye same as followeth, my just debts and funerall charges being first paid:

I give and bequeath to well beloved wife Sarah, ye use & improvement of ye one-half part of my house & barn and homlot, said building standing or lying in ye southerly part of Ridgfield Town, during ye terme or time she shall remain my widow.

ITEM. I give and bequeath unto my loving sons Alexander, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, all my land and reall estate that I shall die possessed of or have any right to; except what I have before given away by deed of gift to them and their heirs and assigns forever, to be equally divided amongst them my said four sons.

Lastly, I do hereby appoint, constitute and fully impower my well beloved wife Sarah to be my executrix, together with my loving son Alexander Resse-chased a large tract between that town and Danbury. The purchase was made of Catoonah, the chief sachem, and other Indians, who were the proprietors of that part of the country. The deed bears date Sept. 30, 1708. At this session (1709) it was ordained that it should be a distinct township, by the name of Ridgefield." — History of Connecticut, by Benj. Trumbull, D.D., Vol. I., page 460.

It would be interesting to note the distribution of this large estate to the heirs, but no record of such distribution can be found. After the death of the mother, her personal estate, consisting chiefly of wearing apparel and household belongings, amounting in value to £182 6s. 6½d., was divided among the four sons.*

Alexander Resseguie, Jr., born Aug. 27, 1710; married in Wilton, Conn., Feb. 16, 1737-8. Thankful Belden. Their dates of death are unknown, but both were living in 1793. But little has been learned concerning Alexander, Jr. He was one of the heirs named in his father's will, and received from his mother's estate a "double portion," as the eldest son, one-half of it consisting of a "negro wench," whose value was set down at forty pounds. He was the possessor of much real estate, largely inherited from his father, and like him appears to have devoted his time to agriculture and the improvement of his lands. Silver ore, which, to some extent, has been found in that section of Connecticut, existed upon his property, and in 1675 a mine was opened, located near the northern boundary of the town of Wilton, and a lease* of the property for one hundred years granted

*"This Indenture made the seventeenth day of May 1765, between Alexander Resseguie of Norwalk, in the County of Fairfield and Colony of Connecticut, of the one part, and Samuel Betts, Nathan Hubbell, Matthew Mead, Matthew Mervine, James Olmsted, Junr, Silas Olmsted, Joseph Rockwell, Junr, Jesse Ogden, all of Norwalk, and Matthew Fountain of Bedford in West Chester County, and province of New York, of the other part, witnesseth, that the s^d Alexander Resseguie as well in Consideration of the Cost and Charges which the said Samuell Betts (et al) must necessarily expend in and about the undertaking, adventures and works hereafter mentioned, and in Consideration of Reservation & Covenants hereafter mentioned Contained by and on the parts of the said Samuel Betts. (et al) their heirs, Executors and Administrators and Assigns, free Liberty, License and Authority, from time to time and at all or any time or times During the Term hereafter mentioned, to Dig, Search, work for, and raise all such Lead ore, or Copper ore, Tin ore, and all other ores and minerals whatsoever, which can or shall or may be found, Digged, gotten up or raised, as well in, from, or out of all or any part or parts of the Lands or grounds of or belonging to the said Alexander Resseguie, situate and lying in the Township of sd Norwalk near the Dwelling House of Azor Belden, in quantity about forty acres, bounded north by John Belden, Easterly, Ezekiel Wood, South by Ezekiel Wood, and Solomon to certain parties for the purpose of taking out the ore. In 1774 Alexander deeded this property to his son William, subject to the above named lease. During the Revolutionary war the mine was filled with brush and rubbish, undoubtedly for the purpose of keeping its existence secret from the British, who at times abounded in that region. It remained in this condition until 1876, when it was cleaned out and a company formed for the purpose of working it, but a question arising as to the validity of title, and the prospect of success being considered too vague

Wood's heirs, West by highway, . . . and liberty of ingress, Egress to and for the said Samuel Betts (et al) their heirs, Executors, Administrators & assigns, and their servants and workmen at all times during the term hereafter mentioned, with horses and carriages to and from the same, except and always Reserved out of the said grant, unto the said Alexander Resseguie, his heirs and assigns, one full equal eight part, the whole into eight equal parts being divided, of and in the said ores and minerals which shall arise, be digged and gotten in the lands aforesaid, after the same is pounded and washed and fitted for Refining, free of all charges of the same, for and in Lease of the Toll and farm, to be had and taken by the said Alexander Resseguie, his heirs and assigns in such manner as is hereafter mentioned. To have and to hold all and singular, sd Libertys and privileges before Leased, unto the sd Samuel Betts (et al.) their heirs, executors, administrators, and from the day of the date hereof for and during the term of one hundred years next ensuing, fully to be completed and ended, yielding and delivering unto the said Resseguie, his heirs and assigns the said one eighth part, the whole into eight equal parts being divided, hereinbefore excepted, of all of the ores and minerals which shall be so digged, raised, after the same is pounded and fitted for refining, out of the lands aforesaid or any part thereof as aforesaid, and to have, hold and enjoy their remaining seven eights parts thereof, to them, their heirs, Executors, Administrators & assigns to their own proper use and uses as aforesaid. As witness whereof we have set our hands and seals. The consideration of the above written instrument is such that if the above mentioned persons shall continue to carry on and prosecute the above mentioned enterprise, then this Lease to stand in full force, otherwise to be null and void.

to warrant the necessary expenditure, it was soon abandoned by its projectors.

Undoubtedly the large property formerly held by the senior Alexander, and bequeathed by him to his children, became largely reduced by the events connected with the Revolutionary war, which depreciated property everywhere and proved the financial ruin of so many people. The family became scattered and the closing years of the eighteenth century found them located widely apart. No stone marks the burial place of Alexander and his wife, but probably the old cemetery in Ridgefield received their remains. The will of Alexander Resseguie is dated July 27, 1793. It was written in a beautiful script upon two pages of a sheet, the lower half of which has been burned away. It is a relic of the hair trunk noted on page 10. The legible portion of the will is here given. No record of its probate has been found.

"In the name of Almighty God; Amen:—this 27th day of July A. James Resseguie, born Nov. 6, 1713. A thorough search of records and diligent inquiry, fails to gain much information concerning him. The only scrap attainable besides the record of his birth, relates to the fact that he died in the French and Indian War. That he married and had a family is beyond question, for circumstantial evidence points to him as the progenitor of a goodly line of descendants. In the absence of documentary evidence this may be considered amply sufficient to justify the place given him by the compiler.

Isaac Resseguie, born May 24, 1717. We know but little about him. He lived first at Ridgefield, and was one of the heirs under his father's will, and received also his portion of his mother's estate. He removed over the border into New York, and evidently settled upon land owned by Colonel Roger Morris, holding as a tenant, for June 4, 1782, he purchased of the commissioners of forfeiture,* for the sum of £58 10s. this land, which is described as follows:

"Situate in Fredericksburgh Precinct,† Dutchess county, in possession of Isaac Ressegue. Beginning at a stake and stones by the road in the line of Duke Foster's land, then in the line of said Foster's land north seventy degrees west, thirteen chains, eighty links, to a stake twenty-five links west from a white oak sapling marked: then in the line of Isaac Perce's land, south fifteen degrees west fifty chains seventy-five links, to a black oak stump with stones on it in the line of John Ganung's land: thence in the line of said Ganung's land south forty-two degrees east twenty-nine chains to a stake at said Ganung's northeast corner in the line of Yeoman's land on the westerly bank of Croton River, then north eighteen degrees east thirty chains, eighty links, to a large black oak tree marked, at the southwest corner of said Foster's land, then north three degrees west thirty-three chains seventy-five links to the beginning, containing one hundred and thirty acres more or less."

We do not know that Isaac Resseguie married, unless the following extract from the Redding (Conn.) Church records, refers to him: "Dec. 28, 1766, Simon, son of Isaaiah (Isaack?) and Sarah Russica." (Baptized.) If this is intended for our Isaac, and he had a son Simon, no further evidence has been found of his existence.

* "A strip 50 rods wide along the east border of the county constitutes a part of the 'oblong tract' and was patented by Thomas Hawley and his associates June 8, 1731. The remaining part of the county (Putnam) and a small part of Dutchess, are included in the great Highland Patent of Adolph Philipse. At the time of the Revolution this Patent was owned by Philip Philipse, and Mary and Susannah, wives of Colonel Roger Morris and Beverly Robinson, of the British army. Morris and Robinson, together with their wives, were attainted, and their property was confiscated and sold by the Commissioners of Forfeiture, chiefly to their former tenants." — French's Gazetteer of New York, page 540-1.

† Frederickstown Precinct was formed March 24, 1772, and was named for Frederick Philipse. It included the present towns of Carmel and Kent. Kent was formed as Frederickstown March 7, 1788: its name was changed to Frederick, March 17, 1795, and to Kent, April 15, 1817. The town received its present name from the Kent family who were early settlers. Carmel and a part of Patterson were taken off in 1795.

Jacob Resseguie, born Aug. 14, 1719; married Mary Curtis of Stratford, Conn. (perhaps the daughter of Nathan and Eunice (Judson) Curtis). She died March 17, 1797, aged 77 years. He died Dec. 27, 1801. They lived in Ridgefield. By his will, made March 13, 1799, and probated Jan. 28, 1802, he bequeathed to his daughter, Mary Burt, five shillings; to his daughter Hannah, £60; the remainder to be divided equally between his two sons, Jacob and Alexander. His estate inventoried at $2,233.27.

Margaret Resseguie, born Feb. 20, 1741; died in Ballston, N. Y., Oct. 10, 1842. She married, Sept. 18, 1764, Joseph Riggs,* as his second wife. He was born in Stamford, Conn., May 18, 1738, and died June 15, 1805. In seeking information relative to Mrs. Riggs, the compiler received from her great-grandson the following, given under the caption "Recollections of my Great-Grandmother Riggs when about One Hundred Years of Age," which will be of undoubted interest to the reader.

"She was of a little more than medium height and as straight as any of the girls and boys in their teens. She had a vivid recollection of the scenes and incidents of the Revolutionary War, and of the important events that led to the war, as well as those that succeeded. She was remarkably vivacious, enjoyed society; indeed, was highly social and was 'good company,' as we say. Her sight was somewhat dim, but not so much so that she could not see to go about the house, and even out the door. Her hearing was poor in one ear, while with the other she could hear quite well. . . . In the autumn after grandfather's death, my father and grandmother Riggs started for Groton (Tompkins County, N. Y.), to go with her to Ballston. They went by private conveyance to Syracuse, and reached that place, distant about forty miles, near the middle of the afternoon, and did not get their dinner until then. They were all tired and hungry, but great-grandmother, as she pushed back from the table after a hearty meal, remarked, 'I am quite refreshed, as the boy said when he got a whipping.' She, although in her one hundred and first year, endured the journey quite as well as any of the party. I think I have been told that when she was about sixty years of age she had a severe sickness, and was bed-ridden for many years (I think fifteen), when she got up. One day, when left alone, she worked her feet off the bed and finally managed

* Joseph Riggs was the son of Miles and Elizabeth (Whitney) Riggs, and first married Aug. 4, 1761, at New Canaan, Conn., his cousin, Mary Keeler, who was baptized at New Canaan, May 16, 1742, and was the daughter of Daniel and Hannah (Whitney) Keeler. They had one child, Jonathan, who married Jan. 1, 1792, at Norwalk, Conn., Esther Keeler, and whose children were: 1. Julia, born Jan. 5, 1793. 2. James, born April 13, 1794; died Oct. 2, 1795. 3. William Resseguie.* The dates of his birth and death have not been learned. He married, in Weston, Conn., Dec. 16, 1771, Susannah Patrick. The homestead in Ridgefield was deeded to him by his father, and is the property referred to in the will of Alexander, Jr. Subsequently he removed to Fishkill, N. Y., where he purchased about 400 acres of land. His son Stephen is said to have had a full family record, which was burned with his house and is much to be regretted, as we are left with very meager data relative to the early record.

*The compiler has experienced greater difficulty in obtaining data relative to William Resseguie and his descendants, and with less satisfactory results, than in all other lines combined, and the apparent uselessness of further waiting has decided him to close the work in a somewhat imperfect state; but notwithstanding its imperfection, he is disposed to congratulate himself that the labor bestowed upon it has resulted more favorably than at one time seemed possible.

Timothy Resseguie served in the Revolutionary War, and married after his return from the service. He remained in Ridgefield three years, assisting his father in the promotion of his farming operations, but at the end of that period concluded to make a home for his family in New York State. As an inducement to his remaining upon the paternal acres his father deeded to him the homestead, but he declined the gift, and, shouldering his knapsack, footed it through the country to Ballston Spa., N. Y. Subsequently he removed to Northampton in the neighboring county of Fulton, then to Milton in Saratoga County, and finally to Verona.

Mary Resseguie, born in 1764; died in Wilton, Conn., Dec. 24, 1848. She was probably the youngest child of Alexander Resseguie, Jr., though by some thought to have been a granddaughter. She was a member of his household, and married, Nov. 28, 1779, Thomas Cole. "He was a soldier of the Revolution, and was with the American army while they were occupying New York city, or Manhattan Island, and the British army were stationed at White Plains. He was taken sick while in the discharge of his duty and released from active service. His wife, inspired with a spirit of patriotism, rode to headquarters from her home in Wilton, on horseback, passing through both the British and American lines, and brought him safely to his home. Receiving an honorable discharge, his widow drew a pension for his services until her death." Mr. Cole died in Wilton.

He entered the army at the commencement of the war, at the age of 16, and served to its close, — seven years and five months, when he was discharged honorably by General Washington himself. At the battle of Monmouth he received a musket ball in the leg which he carried in his flesh for seventy-two years; after his death, and at his own previous request, it was extracted and is now in the possession of the family. Miles Riggs, born in Norwalk, Conn., Sept. 10, 1767; died May 12, 1840. He married, Aug. 10, 1791, Mrs. Suse Patchin,* who was born in Norwalk May 19, 1766, and died Sept. 2, 1857. About 1790 Mr. Riggs removed to Ballston, N. Y., and in 1802, or the following year, to Groton, Tompkins County, where he purchased fifty acres of land. The country was new and covered with heavy forests, and the work of clearing a farm was an arduous task. Subsequently Mr. Riggs became the owner of a farm of 640 acres, or a mile square. He was a musician, and soon after getting settled in his new home was invited by the miller, on whom he was dependent for his mill work, to bring his fiddle along when he came to mill. He did so, and played vigorously while the grist was being ground. After the flour was placed in the wagon the miller said: "I have not tolled your grist, Mr. Riggs. Now, any time you want grinding done you come and fiddle for me, and I will grind for you." And for years he fiddled out his grist work. A few years after his death his widow removed to Plainfield, N. J., and died there.

Mr. Riggs was an austere, dignified man, but had also a vein of humor in his composition. On one occasion Deacon Daniel Bradley of Groton came along, after a hard day's work at clearing land, and challenged Mr. Riggs to fiddle for him as long as he would dance. The challenge was accepted, and the deacon was obliged to "tread the light fantastic toe" until the next morning. At one time his services as musician brought him 1,000 feet of clear pine lumber, which he contributed to the new meeting house, then in process of construction, and it was made into a pulpit. Mr. Riggs was an Episcopalian, but attended the Presbyterian church, then the only one in Groton. His old log house was kept as a tavern, and Mrs. Riggs was a famous landlady. Her excellent table and beds attracted all regular travelers, who made it a point to spend a night there. In 1824 Mr. Riggs built the largest dwelling house in the town, where his children and their families often met, to the number of thirty or forty. On one of his visits to Albany he purchased a cooking stove, which was the first one used in the town of Groton. He is remembered as a strictly just man, always sincerely honest in his dealings and requiring the same of others.

Samuel Resseguie, born in Ridgefield, March 12, 1776; died in South Gibson, Pa., Sept. 12, 1858. He married in Westport, Conn., Nov. 2, 1797, Freelove Disbrow, daughter of Justus* and Elizabeth (Sherwood) Disbrow of that place. She died in South Gibson, April 28, 1830, aged 49 years. He married (2d) in Clifford, Pa., June 22, 1831, Nabby Pickering Miller, widow of David Miller and daughter of Jotham † and Elsie (Pickering) Pickering of Clifford. She was born May 4, 1786, and died in Lenox, Pa., March 27, 1867.

Samuel Resseguie resided in several different places in the vicinity of Fishkill, N. Y., until about 1806, when he purchased a farm near what is now called Farmers Mills, Putnam County, where he remained until his emigration to Pennsylvania, where he arrived May 8, 1813. He settled in what is now South Gibson in Susquehanna County, on wild land situated in the valley of the Tunkhannock, one of the principal tributaries of the Susquehanna River. Here he endured the hardships and suffered the privations of a pioneer life, in common with the early settlers of Gibson township (the principal part of whom originally came from Connecticut). His wife, Freelove, is described as possessing a small, lithe figure, energetic, industrious, and in every way a prudent helpmate, manufacturing with her own hands from the raw flax and wool the wherewithal to clothe her family. After the lapse of seventeen years, when the log cabin had been supplanted by the "framed house," and the wilderness was fast receding before the approach of civilization, at the dawn of better days, she was summoned to lay down her life work.

* Justus Disbrow was a soldier of the Revolutionary War. While absent from his home, engaged in the defense of his country, his wife, who was left with eight children to provide for, heard that "the Tories were coming," and carried her beds, clothing, and provisions and hid them in the swamp, but they were discovered and burned together with the house and all it contained. The affrighted mother and children sought refuge behind a stone hog-pen, which was battered by the bullets of the enemy, who, on discovering the hidden family, tore the clothing off the children's backs and cast it into the fire.

† Jotham Pickering emigrated with his family in 1793, from Mendon, Mass., to New Milford, Pa., "and removed to Gibson in 1798, that he might unite his family of children with those of another to establish the first school in Gibson township." It is related in the history of Susquehanna County that the first teacher in Gibson did not know how to write. Mr. Pickering and his family figure largely in the history of the county. The youngest son of Mrs. Miller, Dr. A. P. Miller, became an efficient school teacher and practitioner of medicine, and was the first postmaster of South Gibson, which position he retained until his death. Her daughter married a son of Samuel Resseguie (Lewis 213) and her son Henry's children have married into the Resseguie family.

In personal appearance Samuel Resseguie was a type of foreign blood, his father being of French and his mother of Irish descent. He possessed perfect health, never being obliged to call a physician until his last sickness. His sanguine temperament, florid complexion, and great obesity rendered him fair, fat, and funny. Physically he bore a striking resemblance to Sir John Falstaff. His corpulence and longevity were transmitted to nearly all his children. That he had strength of character is evidenced by the fact of his signing the pledge during a Washingtonian temperance movement, which he preserved inviolate to the day of his death, which occurred some twenty-five or thirty years later. Politically he was a Democrat, until the formation of the Republican party, the slavery question causing him to forsake the one and embrace the other. The history of Napoleon Bonaparte, and his old family Bible (weighing eighteen pounds), were his chosen library and chief companions during his declining years.

To his family he was earnestly devoted, sacrificing everything for their comfort and education. When the society was being formed to erect the Second M. E. He sympathized and labored and gave to the extent of his ability; when disaster came, his cheerful spirit encouraged the weaker brethren. He was a member of the first official board, and never flagged while health permitted him to bear his part of the burden of the church."

Abraham Resseguie, born in Ridgefield, Conn., Feb. 6, 1782; died in Caldwell, Wisconsin, July 24, 1856. He married in Hubbardton, Vt., in 1813, Lovina Robinson, daughter of Isaiah and Sarah (Foot) Robinson. She was born in Hubbardton, Aug. 18, 1786, and died in Caldwell, June 20, 1858.

Abraham Resseguie removed from his native place to Hubbardton, Vt., in 1812. He continued the cultivation of a rough and rocky farm until 1835, when with several of his neighbors he started for the west on a prospecting tour, and the following year sold his farm and removed his family to Wisconsin, or the "North-west Territory," as it was then called, where a neighbor, Joseph Caldwell, had preceded him. The journey was made by the Erie Canal, and by boat through the great lakes, and on the first of July they landed at Pike River, now Kenosha. Mr. Caldwell had built a log house, twenty feet square, about three miles from the landing, and although possessing a large family he gladly welcomed Mr. Resseguie and his family to his hospitable abode, and found room under his roof to bestow the twenty-six persons which the combined families numbered. Soon afterward Mr. Resseguie removed to the northwestern part of Racine County, and took up a claim of 320 acres on a beautiful, fertile, well-watered prairie; built a log house and removed his family thither. His neighbor, Mr. Caldwell, had already located a claim in that section, and the place was named for him as the first proprietor, "Caldwell's Prairie." In this house the family resided for eight years, and though the cost of provisions at the lake ports was exorbitant, and food poor in quality, and often difficult to procure at all, they entertained hospitably all who passed that way. In 1844, Mr. Resseguie erected a substantial frame dwelling in which the remainder of his life was passed. Without possessing brilliant qualities that distinguished him above his fellow-men, he was a man of strict integrity, loved by his family and respected by all. "Uncle Abra'm." as he was familiarly called, was regarded by all as a friend that could always be relied upon. He was a devoted christian, a member of the Congregational Church, and always gave liberally of his means in support of the gospel.

Samuel Resseguie, born in 1800; died in San Francisco, Cal., Jan. 26, 1855. He married Anna ———, who died in San Francisco, March 10, 1880. Mr. Resseguie left Ridgefield, Conn., his native place, and settled first in Susquehanna County, Pa., and afterward in Kenosha, Wis. From the History of Kenosha County, the following extract is taken: "On the 7th of July, 1835, Mr. Samuel Resseguie arrived in Kenosha, and, to use a squatter's phrase, "jumped the island." Mr. Resseguie brought with him a Mr. John Noble and a number of brothers by the name of Woodbridge, and others, and he accordingly had quite a formidable force to sustain him in holding possession. This circumstance occasioned the first dispute about the right of property that had occurred at this place: but the dispute, which at one time threatened to cause some disturbance, was finally amicably settled, and Mr. Resseguie retained a portion of the island, either by purchase or some other compromise. After camping on the island for about two weeks, Mr. Resseguie commenced the erection of a log house, and shortly after completing it opened it as a tavern. Although this humble public house was not equal to the Grant House, it served its purpose well. But few men knew how to cater to the appetites of their guests better than Resseguie: his table was provisioned with the best wild game the surrounding country could furnish, and the economy with which he was accustomed to stow away his numerous guests in a given area in his little garret was truly astonishing. His success was so unexpectedly great in the line of tavern-keeping that he concluded to enlarge his business; accordingly, in the following month, he opened a store in an adjoining cabin, under the firm name of Resseguie & Noble."

He subsequently emigrated to California, settled in San Francisco, and at the time of his death owned the premises known as No. 4 Wetmore Place. By his will his property was divided equally between his wife and his daughter, Eleanor Edwards. Mrs. Resseguie died at the house in Wetmore Place, leaving a will, by which her house and furniture was devised to her granddaughter, Mrs. Anna R. Smith, of Glen Rock, Nevada, and the residue of the estate to Mrs. Smith's daughter, Eleanor Galvin.

The following obituary notice is from the Danbury Recorder: 'But few are laid in the last resting-place of the body of a more peaceable life or possessed of a more practical philanthropy. Of an unaffected familiar manner and unchanging good humor, his cheerful countenance, welcome salutation, and kind inquiries rendered his society pleasant and imparted a good and salutary influence in his intercourse with others. He was one of that venerable class of men whose peculiar simplicity of manners and honesty of purpose are rare characteristics, and are needed as healthy examples to counteract the selfishness and insincerity which harm the characters of young men now coming upon the stage of life. He was for thirty years a member of the Congregational Church in this village.'—Mygatt Genealogy."

About the time of his marriage he embarked in mercantile business for a short time. He removed to Pent Yan, Yates County, in 1832, and lived there three years, during which time he was employed as captain of a canal boat running between Albany and Buffalo. In Sept., 1835, he removed to Ann Arbor, Mich., and the next spring to Grass Lake, where he bought a farm upon which he remained until 1866. In the fall of that year he removed to Norvell and engaged in mercantile business, but two years later returned to his farm. Shortly after this, his health beginning to fail, he retired from active life, and went to live with his son in Manchester, Mich., where the remainder of his life was passed.

Abijah Resseguie, born in Ridgefield, Conn., March 26, 1791; died there April 16, 1887, aged ninety-six years. He married, Feb. 1, 1829, Anne Keeler, daughter of * Timothy and Esther

* "Squire Timothy Keeler was born in 1769, and died in 1815. He was a representative in the General Assembly, justice of the peace, and postmaster for many years."—S. C. Goodrich (Peter Parley).

(Kellogg) Keeler, of Ridgefield. She was born Nov. 9, 1787, and died in Ridgefield Dec. 23, 1862. Mr. Resseguie was for many years the proprietor of the "old Keeler tavern," which, under the management of his father-in-law, 'Squire Keeler, was widely famous as a hospitable hostelry. The old tavern sign was long since taken down, but it may not be uninteresting to quote a few brief lines from "Peter Parley's 'Recollections of a Lifetime,'" in support of the reputation once accorded it: "He who wishes to eat with a relish that the Astor House, or Morley's, or the Grand Hotel de Louvre cannot give, should go to Ridgefield and put himself under the care of Mrs. Resseguie. When you go there—as go you must—do not forget to order ham and eggs, for they are such as we ate in our childhood. As to blackberry and huckleberry pies, and similar good gifts, you will find them just such as our mother made fifty years ago, when these bounties of Providence were included in the prayer, 'Give us this day our daily bread,' and were a worthy answer to such a petition." A cannon-ball, shot by the British during the Revolutionary War, may still be seen firmly imbedded in the northeast corner post of the house.

The following interesting and comprehensive account of Mr. Resseguie is taken from the Ridgefield Press:

"The soul of the venerable and respected landlord, Abijah Resseguie, has left its earthly habitation and gone before. The fruit has fully ripened and is gathered into the storehouse.

"Mr. Resseguie was a descendant of staunch old Huguenot stock, remarkable for longevity of life and sturdiness of manhood. In the bloody massacre of St. Bartholomew (1572) many of his ancestors perished. He was ninety-six years of age at the time of his death. Notwithstanding his old age, a week before he died, in a chat with a neighbor, he seemed to enjoy the witticisms and general conversation as much as he would have done in his younger days. He astonished his friends with his wonderful gift of memory. He could recall any important event in his own life or the general history of his country.

"While men who live but half his ripe years become 'old-fogyish' in their notions, Mr. Resseguie was always up with the times, and took deep interest in all current doings and events, local and general. He believed in progress, and was always watching as carefully the many improvements in 'old Ridgefield' as did his younger neighbors.

"Mr. Resseguie was a man who never indulged in tobacco in any form; he was not straight-laced, by any means, in his manner of living, though he believed in temperance. He knew how to cater to the traveling public in the cuisine line, and he could enjoy a good dinner, too. He never exercised fanaticism in matters which to him seemed right. He was far from being narrow in his views, and, while enjoying discussion of a question, he would always concede the point when worsted. To sum up,—he was as much unlike the vast majority of elderly country people of our time as is day unlike night. He might have been called, with semblance of truth, a young man of progressive ideas in the guise of an elderly gentleman.

“At an early age, Mr. Resseguie showed evidence of a mechanical bent of mind; and it was not a mistake when, in his fifteenth year, after having acquired a fair education, he was apprenticed to a carriage-maker, John Watrous, who lived in a cottage occupying the site of the present home of Mr. Charles Brown. His employer, perceiving inventive genius in the lad, soon made him a valuable assistant during their ‘off hours,’ in contriving labor-saving tools for the trade, and even in attempting to solve that most perplexing of all enigmas, perpetual motion. And here we might parenthetically state that Mr. Resseguie, from boyhood to the month of his death, studied with deep concern all the great inventions of the past century,—the steamboat, the locomotive, the electric telegraph, and, in Edison’s time, the later wonderful achievements. When he visited the Brooklyn bridge three or four years ago, he stood on that mammoth structure for an hour examining into and inquiring about the principles of the cable road. At this time he visited the New York Stock Exchange, and expressed satisfaction in noting the many wonderful achievements in modern architecture.

“After serving his apprenticeship, he continued to pursue his trade in the town of his birth, and for years he was the respected head of the firm of Resseguie & Olmstead, doing a thriving carriage business. The firm shipped vehicles South and West, and supplied Orange County, N. Y., with hundreds of wagons of Ridgefield manufacture.

“In the year 1828 Mr. Resseguie began to realize that it was not good to live alone; and, like thousands of his fellows, discovered the ‘one ideal of his heart,’ and Miss Anna, daughter of Landlord Keeler,—who ‘kept tavern’ in the very house in which our subject passed away—was led to the hymeneal altar. When Mr. Keeler died the hotel fell into the hands of Mr. Resseguie, and for sixty years our late venerable resident has been known as Landlord Resseguie. Mrs. Resseguie died in 1862.

“Mr. Resseguie never courted notoriety or prominence, and whatever official position he held was thrust upon him. Like all other respectable citizens of a country town, he was an available candidate for town offices, and filled several such positions during his earlier life. He was also elected to the General Assembly in 1847, and gave satisfaction to his constituents. In general politics he was conservative, but voted with the Whigs, and afterward with the Republicans.

“Being a man of strict integrity, honor, and principle, Mr. Resseguie was a faithful adherent of his religious creed. He early connected himself with St. Stephen’s Church, this village, and took active part in all that society’s doings throughout the best years of his life. For twenty years he was a warden, filling that office acceptably to within a year of his demise.

“It was deeply interesting and exceedingly amusing to the neighbor and friend to listen to the aged landlord’s anecdotes and incidents connected with his career, many of which give so true a picture of Ridgefield in earlier times. He remembered distinctly to have heard the church bells toll on the day of Washington's death. He was then only eight years of age. He was a witness of the last flogging which took place in Ridgefield—that barbarous punishment so repulsive to modern times; and he often related how cruel was the scene of the whipping-post, and of the rejoicing of the people when that relic of barbarism was abolished.

“Words fail to give more than the slightest idea of the geniality and sunshine which hallowed the departed innkeeper's existence. He never looked on the dark side. He was always ready to enjoy a witty story, and as a story-teller he was always popular on the long winter evenings, while the company of friends, with the quota of travelers, were gathered about the old-time fireplace with its crackling logs. There was no end to his humor.

“To show how sturdy he was in his old age, it may not be amiss to state that he attended the Centennial Exposition at Philadelphia in 1876, and that, at eighty years of age, he tired out the younger members of his party sight-seeing in Washington.

“Within a few years he seemed deeply interested in the Mackay-Bennett cable, and interviewed every caller whom he thought might have been posted on the subject. Mr. Resseguie is conceded by the fraternity to have been the oldest Free Mason in the country, he having joined the order in the year 1812. Because of this fact he had acquired a national reputation.

“The funeral of Mr. Resseguie was attended at his late residence on Tuesday, at 11 o'clock, A. M., Rev. W. W. Leete officiating. The house was filled with sympathizing friends, and the very few who remain to claim the closer tie of kinship with the deceased. Several beautiful floral designs were about the house, some of them presented by those who sojourn here during the summer, and who had learned, like the rest of us, to appreciate the cheerful presence of the one who has now gone from our village no more to return. The service, in keeping with Mr. Resseguie's taste and at his daughter's request, was simple and brief. After reading from the Episcopal service to the end of the Scriptural selection, Mr. Leete remarked somewhat as follows:

“I turn from the sustained dignity of this noble service of burial, which, in its lines, emphasize the solemn thoughts of death, judgment, and the life to come, as also the sweeter comfort of Gospel hope, to speak but one word of the departed. As we take out from this ancient homestead the venerable form which has so long been a tenant here, it would seem strange to allow that word to remain unspoken. Your hearts are all occupied with it, and I would not divert them by mentioning something new.

“It is no ordinary life which has closed. When we reflect on the period through which that life has extended, we feel the force of this remark. His years almost covered the age of the constitution of this republic, his eyes beholding the light of every presidential administration. He saw thrones tremble, and heard of “war and rumors of wars” on every continent. Agitations of thought and social reformations of the most extensive kind have affected the world since he took his place in it. The services and inventions which contribute now so materially to the comforts of living have come to their perfection under his notice. No one was more desirous of understanding them or ready to acknowledge their merits than he. His life has thus run through all the changes of our busy nineteenth century like a golden thread. The facts and events which group themselves along the line and are even associated with his person crowd our memory to-day, and might engage our attention very long.

“But the quality of his life, not its duration or the remarkable events which came in connection with it, makes it most precious to us who gather to-day. He was a rare spirit. A few moments’ conversation with him revealed mental and social qualities of a very high order, while the sweetness of his character was a reminder of the Divine Master whom he had learned to obey.

“Sprung from the blood of the Huguenots, he exercised toward all, both in speech and action, that sweet charity which was so wanting in the men who persecuted his ancestors beyond the sea. These facts and qualities, not to mention his public position as the keeper of this house, which has already taken its place in written history, gave him somewhat the position of a patriarch. He seemed as a father to all of us who passed up and down by his door. He belonged to every one, as did not other persons in our streets. As townsmen, we took pride in him, and almost the first question of the stranger was about the health of the old gentleman who kept the hotel. To know Ridgefield was to know him, and, in an absolute sense, to know him was to know Ridgefield, for none knew so much about it or had a greater interest in the past and future. His memory, very accurate and lively down to the last, was an unfailling storehouse, open to the searcher for hid treasures, and some of us will regret to-day that we have not more often resorted there.

“And now he is gone, like all our fathers who were but pilgrims and strangers. We come as children to mingle the tears of affection and to testify how much we loved him.

“Take him for all in all,
We shall not look upon his like again.”

“Genial and vivacious, but gentle and pure and patient, maintaining these traits even to the hour of death, after the lapse of almost a century, the inmates of this house, who have watchfully ministered to every want, and the wider circle in which he was held, have never had occasion to do aught but thank God for this marked exception to the statement of Scripture as to the number of man’s days.

“I will not say more. I would not voice an eulogy, which would be to him, of all men, most distasteful. And yet, with less than I have spoken our responsive hearts cannot be satisfied, as we pronounce above the casket of the dear old man the painful word, farewell.”
